

Trevor LaRose

With a background in classical piano, Toronto-based alt-pop musician Trevor LaRose blends his classical foundation with a love for modern pop genres, creating an authentic style of his own.

After attending Berklee College of Music, Trevor moved back to Toronto to begin seriously pursuing his dream of becoming a full-time recording artist and performer. Not long after, he was recognized as one of Canada's top rising artists when he was chosen to participate in season 2 of CTV's hit music series "The Launch". While there, he worked closely with industry titans such as Sarah McLachlan, Scott Borchetta, and producer Alex Hope and he was also chosen as runner-up for the show.

Since then, Trevor's evolution into production and songwriting have allowed him to introduce other elements to his style and extend the range of his talent even further. His unique vocal technique allows Trevor to challenge the boundaries in pop music by utilizing dynamics and prosody, which explore the depths of his musical storytelling outside of the lyrical composition. He is also an accomplished self-taught guitar player.

Trevor works regularly with top Canadian artists and producers such as Tyler Shaw, Nathan Ferraro, Dave Dunlop, and many others. Trevor plans on releasing his debut EP in 2022.
